

While the staff of Sally's Residential Care Home in beautiful Camarillo, California, offers practical services to respond to the physical and emotional needs of clients, there are social benefits that also come with residing in an assisted living community . When children and grandchildren ask themselves “

What is assisted living

?” or “What should assisted living consists of?” they might not readily think of the social elements that may or may not be provided by an

assisted living facility

. At Sally's Residential Care Home, we encourage a family atmosphere through the many activities, birthday celebrations, and holiday events we offer and plan. Our assisted living community is comprised of a caring, hands-on staff that aims to provide the best geriatric services and bring out the best in our residents.

As part of our commitment to providing an exemplary assisted living home for seniors, we offer classes and get-togethers so residents may get to know each other. Many of our residents are used to looking at their family as the core of their social life. However, many family members are focused on spending time developing friendships with their own peers and cannot facilitate all of the resident's social needs. While engaging with family is necessary to the happiness of our assisted living community

, Sally's Residential Care Home encourages the elderly to forge new friendships with their fellow residents. We offer bingo, nature walks, birthday celebrations, arts & crafts, and music and pet therapy sessions as avenues for our residents to bond. This way, our extended family doesn't have to be worried about their loved one feeling isolated or lonely. Sally's Residential Care Home provides the senior with a built-in social network!
