

Many children of seniors do not think of an assisted living home until it is actually time to consider the move for the elderly parent. What are the warning signs an older family member might show to indicate they might benefit from an assisted living facility? One surefire sign is absentmindedness. If the senior continually forgets important dates, short-term events, or to call to check in with their son or daughter, it could be time to consider an assisted living home. Another telling sign is physical changes. If the elderly person begins to experience hearing loss or significant changes in their vision, this might impact their ability to care for themselves. Social withdrawal is another indication. The older person who once enjoyed going to the movies or taking classes at the community center might suddenly hermit away, much to the dismay of their children and grandchildren.

If you have noticed any of these warning signs, it might be time to consider assisted living homes. Sally's Residential Care Home responds to the practical needs of your loved one, while encouraging and facilitating a fuller life. We offer many senior care services, including dressing, bathing, and personal hygiene care. Our loving staff fosters an environment where seniors can feel comfortable and enjoy themselves. We offer many nursing home activities throughout the week, including movie nights, birthday celebrations, arts & crafts, daily walks, and much more. There are many senior assisted living facilities to choose from, but visiting families immediately see that Sally's Residential Care Home is a safe, comfortable place that is both peaceful and fun.

To learn more about Sally's Residential Care Home and to set up a visit, please give us a call today at 1-805-701-1246.